Assembly
Work the flowers onto the front chain of your necklace. The Large flower (no.2) needs to be joined in the middle of the chain so that it hangs in the middle of your necklace more or less like a pendant. You can space the other 4 flowers however you want ☺

When you have attached the flowers to the necklace, leaving at least 4 cm of chain sticking out above the top flowers, it is time to join the front and back parts of your necklace.

To do this, fold the back part of your necklace (the circle) in half. Feed the front part of your necklace through the loops formed on both sides and attach it to itself. Hmmm. What I mean is: you want, in essence, to double the ends of the front part of the necklace over onto themselves so that the back part of the necklace runs through the loops. Still not as clear as it is in my head, but look at the photo's and my poorly executed drawing and you might get a better idea ☺
